Spanning different ages, ethnicities, genders, sexual orientations, and diagnoses, forty-two authors from around the world open up in fifty true stories about their chronic illnesses and their search for answers, poor treatment by doctors, strained relationships with loved ones, self-doubt, and more. They share the warmth of support from family and friends, the triumph of learning coping mechanisms, and finding ways to live their dreams.

These stories are honest, raw, and real, and if readers have chronic illness, they will find comfort and companionship in these pages. For everyone who has wanted to know more about the actual experience of living with chronic illnesses but didn't want to ask the wrong questions, this book has answers and will lead to a new-found understanding.
